Sponsored by ING Wholesale Banking, this is an exhibition of small works independently selected by six prominent figures from the art world: two artists, two collectors and two critics.

Among the selectors this year were collectors Peter Bowles and Lawrence Llewelyn Bowen; Financial Times Art Critic Jackie Wullschlager; Keeper of the Word and Image Department at the V&A, Julius Bryant; Royal Academician, Gus Cummins and artist Lincoln Seligman. Each selector has curated one section of the exhibition, drawing their own selection from works submitted by the public and the works of artists they have personally invited to exhibit.

The uniqueness of having each work chosen by an eminent individual, unlike in a group selected show, has earned the exhibition an excellent reputation among art lovers and collectors alike. The works of lesser-known artists are given the opportunity to hang alongside the work of more established artists helping to connect hundreds of new artists with new audiences.
