

Exploring New Routes, 1 - 31 October

PETER JOYCE: Flooded Fields, Evening Light

Celebrated Poole-born painter PETER JOYCE invites potters Christian Bourcereau, Dan Kelly and Robin Welch to join him for his forthcoming exhibition at the Harris Interiors Gallery in October.

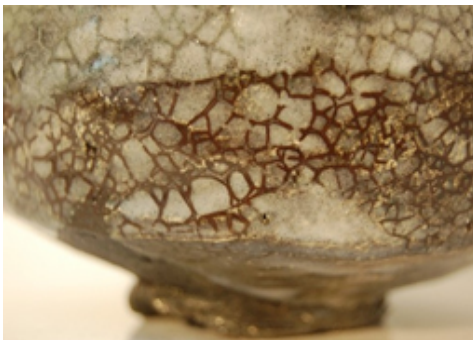

Best known for paintings of his beloved Dorset, Peter's new work, which explores the inlets, waterways and ports of the Vendée, France where he currently lives, has enjoyed critical acclaim amongst fellow artists and collectors alike. Following his success at the London Art Fair in January, and more recently at the New York Fair, Art Hamptons, the exhibition at Harris Interiors provides a rare opportunity to see such a large selection of this latest body of work in Dorset.

Accompanying the paintings will be a new book on Peter's life and work and signed copies will be available to purchase from the gallery for the duration of the exhibition;

'Peter's colours are real and not imagined. They are not decorative despite their tonal rhythm and surface attractiveness. They are glazed from the earth like a ceramicist. His palette has become more varied and more beautiful as it has become more literal'.

Extract by Gary Topp, taken from Peter's forthcoming book.

A keen collector of studio pottery himself, it is fitting that Peter should invite three such talented and individual potters to exhibit their work alongside his paintings, ensuring a unique and must-see art event.
