

Little Buckland Gallery

PRESS RELEASE

11 March 2013

Rising star returns to her roots

Up and coming painter, Charlie Calder-Potts, will be back at Little Buckland Gallery, Broadway, as part of a group show, this spring. After a breakthrough year of exhibitions, in London, New York, Paris and Amsterdam, the Paris-based landscape and portrait painter is heading back to the Cotswolds, where she grew up, and to a gallery that hosted one of her earliest exhibitions.

Little Buckland Gallery is garnering a reputation for spotting and nurturing young talent and its twice-yearly group shows are always worth checking out if you have an eye for a contemporary art investment.

Open from 5 – 14 April 2013, Distillation is an exhibition of abstract and semi-abstract art that brings together a group of contemporary artists who are currently producing work of intense and poetic beauty.
