Time Is Now showcases ambitious new works from the London-based mixed media artist, Anna Masters. Having gained recognition for her signature style of 'floating' wall-based works, this exhibition shows bold new developments in the artist's practice as she investigates three-dimensional form and large-scale interventions.

This exhibition is generously supported by Arts Council England. For more information, see: www.annamasters.com

About the artist:

Anna Masters is a mixed media artist, creating wall-based works and site-specific installations. Using a delicate system of nylon threads, she suspends materials within the frame or the site, creating a sense of an intangible moment, captured and frozen in time.

Time and transience are themes that recur throughout her portfolio. The works toy with the idea of capturing a perfect, inexplicable moment, and subtly question our cultural resistance to time and change, and the paradox of its inevitability.

Anna graduated in 2005 with a First Class Honours Degree in Fine Art. Since then, she has exhibited widely in London and across the UK, including in public art projects Elephant Parade (2010 and 2013-14), Jungle City Edinburgh (2011), The Big Faberge Egg Hunt (2012) and the City of London Festival (2012).
