

PRESS RELEASE

Peter Kent

Painter, draughtsman, chronicler, river watcher, local institution: for over fifty years Peter Kent from his riverside studio has drawn and painted the landmarks and the changes that make our environment. He is particularly synonymous with the River Thames and Greenwich: where the presence of history and the pace of change are the equal of anywhere in London.

Peter's work is highly-prized and is in many collections. His spontaneity, vibrancy and formidable technique have led him to be compared to Paul Hogarth and Hugh Casson, but he is very much his own man: 'Life is about people and places,' he says, 'and I happen to love both.'

This long-awaited retrospective is a fitting tribute to an artist who, at 83, is always looking forward and is as productive as ever.

'Peter Kent – a retrospective' is the exhibition at The Greenwich Gallery on until January 30th
