3-11 Westland Place is home to painters, printmakers, sculptors, and installation artists. The building represents the creative diversity associated with Hoxton, and demonstrates the breadth of talent and artistic accomplishment within East London .

There have been artist's studios at Westland Place for 20 years, making this one of the longest running creative centres in the Hoxton / Old St area.

21 studios, spread over four floors of this former tobacco industry factory, house the workspaces of 23 artists. Their work spans a large range of art disciplines and creative approaches making this an exciting creative environment for all working in the building as well those visiting. Each studio is as unique as the endeavours of the artist working within it.

The studios are located just five minutes walk from Old Street underground station, round the corner from the iconic Shepherdess Café, and sandwiched between Jamie Oliver's restaurant Fifteen. Open Studios 2012 coincides with Jamie Oliver's fifteen 10th anniversary street party, providing food stalls, a bar and live music on the day.

The occupants of Westland Place Studios invite you to explore their workspaces and view their accomplished and varied works.

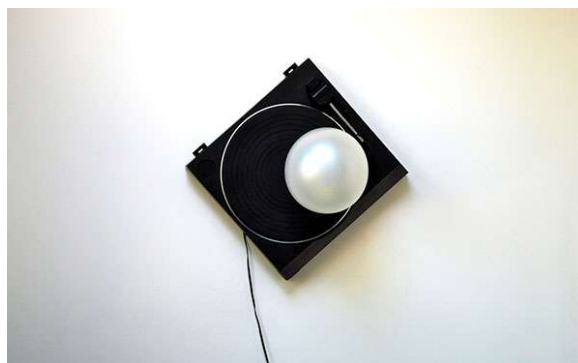

Westland Place Gallery will also be open on the day:
