David Eustace

Still • Landscape • Life

5 – 29 September 2018

David Eustace shows for the second time with The Scottish Gallery and draws on four rich portfolios: Isle of Harris, New York Polaroids, Desert Landscape and Bridge; distinct but thematically linked expressing the artist's continuing engagement with ideas of time and transience. The show entitled Still • Landscape • Life is accompanied by an artist room curated by Eustace.

'David Eustace is a photographer of international practice and repute who has worked across continents for over twenty-five years. The world through his camera lens is on occasion abstract; at times melancholic; always authentically seen and felt.'

In this exhibition, Eustace has brought together four portfolios of work – made in different places and at different times. What links them is indeed the overarching theme of time.

Julie Lawson, Senior Curator, Scottish National Portrait Gallery, Editor of Studies in Photography

The four portfolios are:

- Polaroids: Unique Work (NYC, 2004)
- Desert Lines: (Arizona, 2012)
- Bridge: (London, 2017)
- Mar a Bha (English meaning As It Was): (Harris, 2018)
